

Privacy Policy

This privacy policy relates to The Sites including Thrive More, Now Companies, Happiness 1st Institute, Jeanine Joy (author) and is Founder of Achieve Affinity (a 501 (c)3 organization¹).

We do not share information provided to us outside our organization. We do not sell your information.

Specific client information is always held in confidence. We may use information provided if we receive your express written permission to do so. Information that is not personally identifying may be used by us in books and/or as stories in our programs or in our writings. If used, the information would not be specific enough to identify the source.

For example, if a client advises us that they were filled with anger and provides a story reflecting how that impacted their behavior before our program and shares that after our program they are no longer angry, and that they now handle situations that once made them very angry differently, we might share that story in a general way. We would not use names, or would change the names, dates, places, and other information that could identify the source of the story.

When testimonials are provided during our programs or via other methods, we may choose to share them on our websites or during our programs.

We do not share or sell your information to other companies.

We may use anecdotal comments and stories you share with us to help teach others but ONLY with identifying information removed. We will not share any information that is distinct and that would allow others to determine the origin of the story of comments.

We value your privacy.

If you become a registered user or member of one of our sites, certain information on your profile will be visible to other users or members and we have no control over how they might utilize information you provide in areas which are visible to others. Providing of such information in your public profile is optional.

If you use a Gravatar or other sign-in method linked to an account outside The Sites we have no control or responsibility for information shared through such use.

Your Information is Confidential.
